Jennifer West is a dedicated Mezzo-Soprano and vocal instructor with experience helping singers develop confidence, technique, and a love for music. She has worked with students of all ages to build their vocal technique, musicality, and stage presence. Currently completing her Bachelor of Science in Music at North Dakota State University, Jennifer has studied under esteemed vocal professors, participated in masterclasses to refine her artistry, and performed with renowned ensembles such as the NDSU Concert Choir, Madrigal Singers, and the Fargo-Moorhead Choral Artists.

Teaching has always been at the heart of Jennifer's fascinating journey. She has served as a private vocal coach, a substitute choral teacher, and a Seminary & Institute Instructor, gaining valuable experience in lesson planning, student engagement, and curriculum development. Her leadership roles in regional women's ministerial work have further shaped her ability to mentor and inspire others. Whether in the classroom or the studio, she is committed to creating a supportive, encouraging space where students feel empowered to grow as musicians.

While Jennifer loves the lake life with her husband, four sons, and her dog, her true joy is music. She believes that music is not just about skill, but about storytelling and connection. She loves helping students find their unique voices and guiding them toward expressive, confident performances. Her passion for the healing power of music has also led her to pursue further education in music therapy, where she hopes to combine her teaching experience with therapeutic techniques to help individuals through music. With a love of helping others, she is dedicated to making music a joyful and transformative experience.
